The Avenues were guarded by Parties of the Police, who kept perfect Order, and prevented all Interruption.

At the North-Wall the King's Barge, attended by a great Number of ſmaller Boats, waited to receive the Body and convey it to His Majeſty's Yacht the Dorſet.

From Six o'Clock in the Morning until the final Cloſe of the Proceſſion, Minute Guns were fired from the Salute Battery in the Phœnix Park, and the Church Bells, muffled, rung dead Peals. A double Line of Troops, formed by the Light Infantry Companies of the Garriſon, and a Regiment of Light Dragoons, moved with the Proceſſion. The ſilent and reſpectful Demeanor of the Multitude aſſembled in the Streets, afforded the moſt expreſſive Teſtimony of the general Grief felt on this melancholy Occaſion.

On the Arrival of the Body at the Platform, it was received with all Military Honours by the Troops drawn up on the North-Wall. Whilſt it was removing from the Mourning Chariot, the Bands of Muſic of the ſeveral Regiments played the Dead March in Saul; and on the Body's being placed in the Barge, the Troops of the Garriſon fired Three Vollies.

The Proceſſion on the Water then began in the following Order:

The Commander of His Majeſty's Yacht the Dorſet, in his Ten-oar'd Barge, painted Black and ornamented with various Eſcutcheons of his Grace's Arms. The Oars were alſo painted Black, and the Sailors were dreſſed in White, with Black Crape round their Left Arms, and Crape Hat-bands.

The King's Barge painted Black, with the Body placed under a Canopy, covered with Black Cloth, ornamented with various Banners and Eſcutcheons. The Barge was towed by ſeveral Boats all painted Black, the Crews habited as above-mentioned, their Officers dreſſed in Mourning, with Scarfs and Hat-bands; and on each Side of the King's Barge, a Line of Boats was formed, which attended the Proceſſion to the Yacht.

The Artillery Regiment was formed upon the North-Wall, and fired Minute Guns, and all the Ships in the River carried their Flags half Staff down.

As ſoon as the Proceſſion came within Sight, His Majeſty's Yacht and the Perſeus Frigate fired Minute Guns, which were continued until the Body was depoſited on Board. For the Reception of the Body, the State Cabin and Two other Apartments were hung in Mourning, and ornamented with Banners and Eſcutcheons, with Wax Tapers burning round the Coffin, and ſeveral of his Grace's Aid-de-Camps and Officers of his Houſhold attend it to England.

The Yacht is accompanied in her Voyage by the Perſeus Frigate.

EXPERIMENTS made precisely at One o'Clock every Thursday, at Moore's Patent Elastic-Carriage Repository near Stamford-street, Surrey Side of Black-friars Bridge, London, proving the perfect Security to Persons riding in his Chaise:—1st, By raising the Shafts to the Height they would be by the rearing up of a Horse, and then letting them instantly fall. 2dly, By causing the Shafts to fall to the Ground, while the Chaise is going at the Rate of Six or Eight Miles an Hour. 3dly, By running the Wheels rapidly against a Block, and thereby suddenly stopping the Carriage: In all these Cases, whatever is laid loosely upon the Seat of the Chaise remains there at Rest; and such Persons as may ride in the Chaise, will keep their Seats free from Danger.

There are many other Advantages of Public Utility which attend Carriages constructed upon Mr. Moore's Patent Principles besides Safety, and these Experiments demonstrate the Safety to be greater than in any Phaeton or Four-Wheeled Carriage.

N. B.
